The programme includes highly up-to-date courses and activities.

Doctoral students study interdisciplinary methods in law, approaches to academic research, and enforcement issues, as well as engage in in-depth study of rhetoric and the hierarchy of legal texts in various systems. The school offers master-classes conducted by leading academics, as well as various creative activities. Classes are held in Russian and English.

Furthermore, the programme gives participants skills that are necessary for further success (e.g., abilities to generate new and relevant ideas; write scientific work compatible with the quality found in top international journals; and engage in interdisciplinary dialogue). The programme also prepares researchers to form concepts, evaluate legal reforms, and make thorough academic/scientific enquiries.
