Psychology of Service Activities is one of the most demanded areas of modern practical psychology.

Specialist's diploma in this area, in addition to the traditional opportunities for professional work of a psychologist, gives the right to work in relevant positions in law enforcement, military service, in the structures of the Ministry of Emergency Situations, etc.

According to the curriculum, students learn the disciplines of the humanities (English, sociology, pedagogy, jurisprudence, etc.), the natural sciences (computer science, anatomy, neurophysiology, methods of functional diagnostics, etc.) and the general psychological (general, social, age, clinical, legal, organizational psychology, etc.) cycles.

Many disciplines of practical training: psychodiagnostics, psychological counseling, psychological training, stress psychology, conflictology, psychology of communication and negotiation, etc.

Special training includes courses on military, penitentiary, criminal psychology, the psychology of official activity, extreme situations, etc.
