Programme Focus

The programme is aimed to develop competences in designing territorial management systems, ensuring rational management of social and economic processes both nationally and locally in cities, districts and other municipalities in the best interests of the people and align with modern trends of sustainable development in public administration.

Doing the four-year programme the students study a wide range of general social and natural science disciplines. Professional competences take shape through learning various special subjects. In the third or fourth year the students may opt for a more specific educational path: State Regulation of Socio-Economic Development; Management Of Urban And Municipal Development; Management Of Social Development in Territories; Foundation and Regulation of International Cooperation; Ethno-Political and Interfaith Relations; Infrastructural Provisions of Territorial Development.

Programme Advantages

On completing the programme the graduates are ready to execute powers of public administrators, to fully participate in managerial decisions-making and implementation, to perform other various types of works held as duties of state and municipal employees. They are also able to work in a team, to organize interaction with external organizations and institutions, commercial entities and citizens; are knowledgeable of how to plan the activities of federal and local governmental bodies, to carry out informational and methodological support of managerial decisions.

Internship programme is designed to take the students consistently through all the levels of federal, local and municipal managerial agencies:

- District Councils;
- Municipalities;
- Prefectures;
- State Duma;
- Federal Ministries and Committees;

- real sector economy enterprises;
- members of public-private partnerships.

Some students, especially non-resident, pass internship programmes in the regions on a similar principle.

Graduates' Expertise and Career Opportunities

In-depth knowledge allows the graduates to work in the following vocational areas: public and municipal administration, as well as related areas: civil society institutions, public and non-profit organizations, international organizations and administrations, research and educational institutions.
