The Master's degree programme in "Political Science" of the Institute of International Relations and World History is designed for students willing to associate their professional career with project (consulting, advisory, research and analytical), as well as information activity in the sphere of politics. The educational process guides students through:

- Realization of scientific-research and analytical activity in the sphere of political theory and practice in the Russian Federation;
- Study of Russian and foreign political management experience.

The training also presupposes the review of challenges and trends of world development through the prism of various disciplines: political science, international relations, economics, law, philosophy and sociology.

Graduates of the programme, as staff members of political parties, commercial and public companies, are able to independently design and carry out activities that are being implemented by these organizations.
