Programme Focus

Master`s Degree program "Administrative law and administrative procedure" is the only program in RF and CIS which is aimed at training highly experienced specialist.

All the transformations implemented in Russia nowadays connected with economy. Unfortunately lawyers and economists not often act in concert with each others addressing issues regarding interplay of law and economy. Meanwhile law and economy have close ties: economic relations are expressed through laws, which make them legal; new means of economy development (leasing, mortgage, franchising) are authorized by laws; the state directly intervene in economic life.

Lawyers often ignore economic notions and economists don`t take into account legal elements of economic mechanisms. Lawyers take economic relations as an element of legal regulation. In regard to this issue a lot of questions are raised: what range of economic relations should be regulated by law, to what extent subjects can operate freely in economic sphere, in what cases and under what conditions economic activity can be restricted, if economy can function on its own, in what way international law influences national economy.

In many countries there is a special legal sector, named economic law or more often public economic law.
