Summary: The aim of the education program is to train specialists in the field of research, management, educational, socio-practical, expert advisory activities in the field of theology.

The aim of the program is to train experts in the field of “state-confessional relations”, who possess deep basic humanitarian foundation and the possibility of a wide interdisciplinary application of their knowledge.

Theology cannot be non-confessional, so in the learning process, students will be able to choose a Christian or Islamic profile. However, in the learning process, the student will be able to get acquainted with the doctrinal principles of other religions, the ability to conduct inter-religious dialogue.

Students have the opportunity to internships in structures relevant to their interests, religious organizations (youth departments, pilgrimage centers, etc.), executive authorities, regional councils for state religious expert examination, etc.

Analytical and expert activity in the field of state-confessional, ethno-confessional, inter-religious and socio-political relations has particular importance today.
