The programme is a combination of political science, international relations, public policy, global economy, and project management, which let students obtain extensive knowledge of political world processes. Much attention is paid to the students' language proficiency as the programme is delivered in English. Besides, students can learn a second language (German, French, Portuguese, or Chinese) which should correspond with the region of their interest (Northern Europe, Southeast Asia, BRICS countries). Graduates work in such areas as regional and municipal governments, international even-management organisations, diplomatic missions, NGOs, chambers of commerce.
