The Master's program is implemented by FEFU in partnership with MGIMO in a modular system. At the end of the educational process, graduates receive two diplomas: MGIMO diploma in Political Science, and FEFU diploma in International Relations. The goal of the program is to train experts in international political interactions in the Eurasian region who can successfully compete in both the Russian and international labor markets. Education involves the study of global political and socio-economic processes and patterns of development. Special attention is paid to development trends and international political interactions in the Eurasian region and the APR.
