The educational program is aimed at developing the ability to professionally study society and various aspects of modern social life. The basis of this ability lies in the usefulness of sociological knowledge, its commercial value and relevance. The professionalism of the graduate is inextricably linked with the skills of developing and conducting a full cycle of sociological research, describing the results and making a forecast. This is the most important task and the result of the training program.

Key disciplines of the program:

General and branch sociology; Sociology of economics and management; ethodology and methodology of sociological research; quantitative and qualitative sociological research; visual sociology; case-study method.
